VERMONT INSTITUTE OF NATURAL SCIENCE

VOL. 25, No. 4

FALL 1997 1 August - 30 November

George E. "Terry" Hall, Seasonal Editor

Migration season in the fall of 1997 was, by all accounts, rather disappointing from the standpoint of large numbers and/or rarities produced. No new state records were found, and a draw-down attempt at Dead Creek Wildlife Management Area in Addison was quite literally washed out in September and October. Results from both Vermont Hawk Watch and banding activities at VINS in Woodstock were average. As usual, a group of dedicated volunteers submitted many comprehensive checklists and other reports to VINS, from which data for 234 species were compiled this season. Many thanks to those who contributed data, and although most are acknowledged in the back of this report, many hawk watchers remain anonymous as I gleaned the data from Bill Barnard's excellent synopsis of his crew's work. The efforts of all these good birders are much appreciated.

The weather in August was generally fair and warm, but not hot. Winds were light with speeds under 15 mph, except in the middle of the month when some stormy activity brought the only significant wind and rainfall. An early draw-down at the Stone Bridge area of Dead Creek produced some mudflats with the normal array of birds, but included such goodies as American Golden-Plover, Ruddy Turnstone, Baird's Sandpiper, Wilson's and Red-necked Phalaropes and a few Great Egrets. The only other records of note were from Grand Isle, where both Clay-colored Sparrow and Rufous Hummingbird were seen regularly in August.

September was much wetter and cooler than August, averaging 58.6°F, with nearly 3 inches of rain flooding the impoundments at Dead Creek, all but ending the shorebirding there by the second week. Two good finds for the month were a Sabine's Gull off the Milton shore and a Dickcissel in Addison. October got unseasonably cold with an early but light snow on the 1st, and average monthly temperatures in the 40's, but overall there were light winds and no significant storms. Some of the highlights for the month included Ross's Geese at Dead Creek, Brant, Ruddy Duck, Dunlin and Purple Sandpiper on Lake Champlain, and two potential goodies that David Hoag was not able to pin down conclusively: a probable Yellow-headed Blackbird at Dead Creek, and a Forster's Tern off South Hero.

Winter hit hard and early in November, with 6 inches of snow on the ground in Burlington by the middle of the month and resultant lower average temperatures combined with more wind. Waterfowl continued to dominate the scene, with a Harlequin Duck showing in Button Bay the first week, and a King Eider in Potash Bay on the last day of the season. The "Bird of the Season" may have been a Parasitic Jaeger viewed by many birders off the Tri-town Water Plant in Addison, but a report from Landgrove in southern Vermont of a day-flying Barn Owl on November 13 was very exciting as well. One other report is worth discussing despite the fact that the record was not accepted by the Vermont Bird Records Committee and does not appear in the data below. In mid-November, two birds reported as Shiny Cowbirds spent several days visiting a feeder in South Londonderry. Although Bill Norse felt sure of his identification, he questioned whether the birds were of wild origin. It is ominous to think that this species may be expanding its range in this country, given the track record of Brown-headed Cowbird, but there is in fact a verified record for Shiny Cowbird in Maine.

Notes About Data

A word about the data listings following is in order. As in the past, space limitations prevent us from publishing each and every observation from all those submitted. However, I have compiled every data point into a database, now archived at VINS, a procedure we soon hope to have in place for all incoming observations. For this report, I have listed each of the 234 species in the current American Ornithologists' Union (AOU) Checklist order. Following each species are two numbers divided by a slash — the total reports for that species/the number of observers. If the total is estimated I use the "~" symbol, and if there are multiple observers, as in the hawk watch teams, I add a "+" sign. Therefore, Broad-winged Hawk may be followed by 5992/16+, and Bonaparte's Gull by ~7589/9. In addition, I have taken the liberty to reduce the listings under many species to just a few highlights such as early, high and late records, or eliminate them altogether with common permanent residents. In all cases, any species reported will be listed with at least the totals after the name.

RECORDS OF VERMONT BIRDS is published quarterly by the Vermont Institute of Natural Science. A one-year subscription, which includes the newsletter "Vermont Birds", is $12. Contributors are advised to send accounts of rare or unusual bird sightings to VINS as soon as possible, or to call the Vermont Bird Alert (802-457-2779). Regional summaries of bird sightings are due to VINS promptly at the end of each season. Sighting cards are available from the Vermont Institute of Natural Science, 27023 Church Hill Road, Woodstock, VT 05091-9642, or by calling (802) 457-2779.

LOONS THROUGH WATERFOWL

Both loons and grebes were reported in very good numbers this season. Common Loon staged in the Inland Sea area of Lake Champlain off Grand Isle in mid-October, with highs of 250 reported there. A high of 30 Red-necked Grebe off Grand Isle as early as mid-September was also noteworthy. Double-crested Cormorant was noted in normal concentrations around the nesting sites. Herons were poorly represented, as only Great Blue Heron, Great Egret and Green Heron were reported in any numbers, with no reports of Least Bittern, Snowy or Cattle Egret. Turkey Vulture continued to be very widely reported statewide. An excellent fall for waterfowl was highlighted by impressive showings of Snow and Canada Geese at Dead Creek, with a handful of Ross's Geese, including perhaps the same individual "blue" morph seen in previous years. A word of caution; any report of very small Canada Geese should be carefully scrutinized, as it is very likely that the AOU will split the small northern "Tundra" races into a separate species soon. There were perhaps two sightings of probable minima geese at Dead Creek this fall. In addition, single Harlequin Duck and King Eider drakes were found off Ferrisburg and Addison respectively, very high counts of both Oldsquaw and Red-breasted Merganser came in, and two Ruddy Duck were found in Glover. The only waterfowl not reported were swans, Eurasian Wigeon, Canvasback, and Redhead.

HAWKS THROUGH WOODPECKERS

Raptor migration was normal, with no outstanding events. The bulk of Broad-winged Hawks again moved through a narrow window in early September, though not in record numbers. Golden Eagle is always a highlight, and the total of six included two seen by lucky observers in Bridgewater and Rupert, the rest by "official" hawk watchers. The only hawk not represented this fall was the elusive Gyrfalcon. Grouse and turkey were both reported extensively, whereas rails were restricted to a few sightings from proper habitats. Due to an early draw-down at the Stone Bridge area of Dead Creek, a good mix of shorebirds appeared in August and early September, but by the end of the month the habitat was flooded by rains. Nothing spectacular showed this fall, but some highlights included both Wilson's and Red-necked Phalarope as well as Black-bellied and American Golden-Plover, Ruddy Turnstone, White-rumped and Baird's Sandpiper, Dunlin and Short-billed Dowitcher. Perhaps the best bird was not at Dead Creek, but on Savage Island off Grand Isle, where a single Purple Sandpiper was seen from a boat in late October. Even better was the cooperative juvenile Parasitic Jaeger that spent early November harassing gulls off the Tri-town Water Treatment plant in Addison and was seen by many birders. Gulls and terns were found in very good numbers and variety, the best being upwards of 80+ Little Gulls found in the first months of the season, at least one Sabine's Gull off the Milton shore, a probable Forster's Tern off N. Hero and an astounding 700+ Common Terns staging in the Inland Sea around the Champlain Islands at the end of August. Only Great Horned and Barred Owl were widely reported, and with the exception of an exciting report of a Barn Owl from Landgrove Hollow in southern Vermont, no sightings of other owl species were received. Normal numbers of nightjars, swifts, hummingbirds and kingfishers were reported, including yet another report of Rufous Hummingbird from S. Hero, making it three years running; is this the same bird? Although no Red-bellied Woodpecker sightings came in, the rest of the family was reported widely in good numbers. The exceptions were Red-headed and Black-backed Woodpecker, where only a colony of five Red-headeds was found in its Bridport location and a single Black-backed was seen in Sheffield.

FLYCATCHERS THROUGH HOUSE SPARROW

Flycatchers were reported in normal numbers statewide. Northern Shrike appeared by mid-October but with only six individuals seen. All the vireo species were found, including a White-eyed Vireo in S. Londonderry, but the very few Philadelphia Vireo reports included only banding records from VINS in Woodstock. Corvids, larks and swallows appeared in average abundance; a very interesting summary of Northern Rough-winged Swallow buildup in the Champlain Islands was compiled by David Hoag and is condensed in the data report below. Nothing unusual about parids, nuthatches or creepers was noted this fall, in particular no mass departure of Red-breasted Nuthatch from the area, and wrens were highlighted only by the single Carolina Wren that appeared to reside in Brandon all through the period. Kinglets were stable, and even a few Blue-gray Gnatcatcher reports were received in early August. As a group, thrushes and mimics were well reported and scattered statewide. It was interesting to note that the single Gray-cheeked Thrush report was of a netted bird at VINS, Woodstock, where they have never recorded Bicknell's Thrush, whereas another single observation from Winhall was left to Gray-cheeked/Bicknell's species only. The difficulty in separating these two birds in the field will continue to plague birders for a while I fear. There were no surprises within reports of starling, pipit or waxwings, although the couple of reports of Bohemian Waxwing were as early as mid-November. Many wood warbler species were very sparsely represented, and in fact no reports were received for Blue-winged, Cerulean and Connecticut warblers, Louisiana Waterthrush, or Yellow-breasted Chat; and the only report for Orange-crowned Warbler was not accepted by the Bird Records Committee. No red flags went up in reviewing the reports, as those warblers that were found appeared in healthy, or "normal" amounts. The same could be said for tanager and all the sparrows. American Tree Sparrow showed as early as mid-October in fair numbers, and departure dates for Chipping, Field, Vesper, Savannah, Lincoln's and Swamp sparrows were all within norms, with very few lingering into late fall at feeders. A controversial Clay-colored Sparrow, with an odd song and possibly paired with a Field Sparrow, was noted on Grand Isle through early August. Finally, Fox, White-throated and White-crowned sparrows, Dark-eyed Junco, Lapland Longspur and Snow Bunting all showed in varying numbers by mid- to late-October, pretty much on schedule. Cardinal, grosbeak and buntings were not unusual this fall, but did include an exciting Dickcissel sighting, a single female in Addison. Red-winged Blackbird staged at Dead Creek in Addison by the tens of thousands in late October, so it was not surprising that an unconfirmed report of Yellow-headed Blackbird was received from there as well. A good fall for finches produced reports of all species, including Pine Grosbeak, both Crossbills, Common Redpoll, Pine Siskin and Evening Grosbeak.

MANAGING EDITOR'S NOTE:

We apologize for the late publication of this issue of RVB. The seasonal editors and I are working hard to avoid similar delays in the future. At this point, the Spring 1997 issue remains "in the works," but we are making progress and expect publication soon. Thanks for your understanding.

— Steve Faccio
